Tri-Cross Named One of Dr. Toy's 100 Best Children's Products of 2009

The classic strategy game earns this award for its ability to challenge children to think critically

ATLANTA – September 30, 2009 – Adding yet another accolade to their debut game, Atlanta-based Games For Competitors is proud to announce that Tri-Cross has been named one of Dr. Toy's 100 Best Children's Products of 2009. An abstract thinking game, Tri-Cross met Dr. Toy's criteria for excellence and was chosen for its ease of play, thought provoking game play and overall appeal to school-aged children.

The Dr. Toy Award is the brainchild of Dr. Toy herself, Stevanne Auebach, PhD, the world's leading expert on play, toys, and children's products. Through 30 years of direct experience, Dr. Auerbach uses this national award to search for the most educationally oriented, developmental and skill building products available on the market. Her expertise is highly regarded and parents, teachers and toy buyers look for her guidance when making purchasing decisions.

"Being named one of Dr. Toy's Best 100 products is an honor," said Jeff Burns, owner of Games For Competitors. "We've worked hard to develop Tri-Cross to be a quality game that provides lasting value and learning for children, so to have Dr. Toy praise the game for just that, it is an achievement indeed."

The Dr. Toy award joins Child Magazine's 2008 Game of the Year Award and the National Parenting Center's Seal of Approval in list of accolades bestowed upon the game. To learn more about Games For Competitors or to buy Tri-Cross, visit: www.gamesforcompetitors.com.
